THE BALTIMORE FORGERY. How the Thing Was Done—Adroit Swindle of a Baltimore Sun of yesterday says:—

The swindlers of the present day are famous, and it is wonderful how, of all others, they so often succeed in successfully duping the bankers in our large cities. So numerous and ingenious, however, are the ways of the tricksters that honest men cannot always be with them at the moment. The practice of depositing certified checks and making transactions on them has afforded facilities for swindlers at various times in New York, and yesterday an operation of this sort was got off here on one of our banks.

In the morning, shortly after banking operations commenced, a young man about twenty-eight years of age, of gentlemanly exterior, and dressed in a gray suit, entered the Third National Bank, on South street, near Second, and presented to Mr. A. M. Carter, the cashier, a letter purporting to be signed by L. B. Collington & Co., of New York, introducing him as John B. Thompson.

He entered into conversation with Mr. Carter, informing him of his intention to enter into the tobacco business here, and talking about the different descriptions of tobacco, Kentucky and Virginia products, and other matters connected with the tobacco trade. He referred also to a firm in the trade in Baltimore, with whom he had negotiated for a large sum of money.

He desired to arrange for keeping his account with the Third National, but seemed somewhat displeased when informed that the bank would not allow interest on his deposits. He finally, however, decided on selecting the bank as a depository, and deposited certified checks in the name of L. B. Collington & Co. on a well-known New York bank for $13,000. The man then left, but in a few minutes returned, and remarking that he had immediate use for some money, drew a check for $5500, which was paid to him by Mr. Carter.

He had left the bank the second time, in reply to a telegram sent to the New York bank, word came that the draft for $13,000 was a base forgery. The detective officers were at once put on the alert for the success of the swindler, but to a late hour last evening he had eluded arrest.

ACCIDENT TO A FREIGHT TRAIN. Five Cars Fell Through a Burning Bridge—The Wheeling Intelligencer of Wednesday says:—

Monday night a serious accident happened to a freight train going east on the Parkersburg branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and the result was the falling of five cars over several bridges spanning small streams within a short distance of the village named. A train had passed over the road long in advance of the unfortunate one, and one of the bridges was set on fire. It is believed that the train, driven by General Dent, was carrying a load of whisky, tobacco, and pork. The fireman went down with the wreck, and is supposed to have been instantly killed. Nothing has been seen of him since the train made the fearful fall. The bridge, which is in the bridge communicated fire to the wrecked cars and contents.
